Criminal sanctions play an important role in tax administration. The Government has recognised this and established a task force on money laundering and financial crime, headed by the Attorney-General's Chambers. They have investigated more than 300 businesses and individuals last year for income tax evasion, under-declaration of Customs duties and money laundering. Taxpayers were probed and charged for offences under the Income Tax Act 1967, Customs Act 1967 and the Anti-Money Laundering and Anti-Terrorism Financing Act 2001. The task force's main goal is to identify and assist the Government in collecting revenue that would otherwise be lost through income tax and Customs duty evasion. The Government has warned that taxpayers who commit any of the three tax offences under the Anti-Money Laundering and Anti-Terrorism Financing Act 2001 will face a heavy penalty. The three tax offences are failure to file income tax returns, submitting incorrect income tax returns and wilful evasion of tax. Last year, 1,389 bank accounts belonging to companies and individuals believed to have committed or abetted in a tax offence were frozen. The landscape of tax investigations has changing. It is more challenging than ever and more changes lie ahead.

Learn how to prepare yourself even before the law strikes. Know the manner of maintaining records, accounts, and documents to bolster your client's case in the event of a criminal tax investigation. Discover possible areas that the authorities would focus on and how best to answer its charges. Understand how to conduct yourself during the criminal tax investigation and subsequent meetings. Learn what to do if an acceptable settlement cannot be reached.

Let's get started by attending this special workshop for tax practitioners, the first in Malaysia, on criminal tax investigations by the country's leading tax lawyers.
