INTRODUCTION

Tax deductions are generally not allowed for capital expenditure incurred for business purposes. But certain types of capital expenditure qualifies for tax relief as capital allowances and industrial building allowances or more commonly known as tax depreciation in other countries. To optimize on the qualifying capital expenditure incurred, one needs to determine the eligibility to qualify for such allowances, besides first meeting the definition of plant, machinery or industrial building.

At the same time, these qualifying capital expenditures may qualify for further optimization in accelerating the allowances claimed besides also claiming under other asset based driven incentives.

COURSE OBJECTIVE

This event aims to share the implications arising on issues on capital allowances claim on plant & machinery as well as industrial building allowances. Tax relief from other asset based driven incentives will also be covered.
